MOTION TO DISMISS OR STRIKE
08-CV-1072 BTM NLS

1 (1) Plaintiffs' punitive damages allegations (Complaint, Prayer for Relief ¶ 11) on the 2 basis that the underlying employment relationship alleged is contractual and Civil Code Section
3 3294 is therefore inapplicable;

4 (2) Plaintiffs' allegations as to entitlement to penalty claims (Complaint ¶¶ 30, 34, 48, 5 51, 60, and 65) on the basis that there is no private right to recover penalties;

6 (3) Plaintiffs' allegations defining the "Class Period" as "at least four years prior to 7 the filing of this action to the present" (Complaint at 2:17-19) on the basis that Plaintiffs cannot 8 collect penalties for which there is a private right of action for any period greater than the one-
9 year or three-year statute of limitations that applies to each such private right of action.

10 (4) Plaintiffs' class definition (Complaint ¶ 18) as it applies to Plaintiffs' First Cause
11 of Action (Failure to Pay Overtime Wages), Second Cause of Action (Failure to Provide Meal 12 Periods), and Third Cause of Action (Failure to Provide Meal Periods) on the basis that 13 Plaintiffs' allegations as to overtime, meal and rest breaks fail to identify an ascertainable class;

14 (5) Plaintiffs' allegations relating to reimbursement of automobile expenses
15 (Complaint ¶ 42) contained within its Fourth Cause of Action (Failure To Reimburse Employee 16 Expenses) on the grounds that such expenses are not recoverable as a matter of law.

17 This Motion is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion; the accompanying 18 Memorandum of Points and Authorities; all pleadings and documents on file herein; and on such 19 other and further oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at or before the hearing on 20 the Motion.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Plaintiffs are individuals who have contracted with Defendant to deliver the North County Times newspaper. Plaintiffs have brought this class action claiming that, as a group, newspaper carriers delivering the North County Times have been misclassified as independent contractors. They further contend that Defendant, as their alleged employer, has unlawfully deducted from their wages and denied them overtime wages and other forms of payment.

More specifically, as relevant to this motion, Plaintiffs claim that Defendant has violated various sections of the California Labor Code,¹ has denied meal and rest breaks, has failed to pay wages due upon termination, and is liable for penalties for a class period extending back four years prior to the filing of the complaint. All of this alleged liability stems, of course, from an alleged employer-employee relationship.

As argued below, certain of Plaintiffs' claims are unsustainable as a matter of law:

- They cannot recover punitive damages on their claims.
- They cannot collect civil penalties for which there exists no direct private right of action.
- They cannot collect penalties for which there is a private right of action for any period greater than the one-year or three-year statute of limitations that applies to each such private right of action.
- Their class-wide claims of overtime, meal- and rest-break violations fail to identify an ascertainable class.
- They cannot maintain their Section 2802 claim for unreimbursed routine employee expenses, as Section 2802 does not apply to such expenses.

RELEVANT FACTS

The Defendant operates the North County Times newspaper (Complaint ¶ 10). Defendant has classified the Plaintiffs—carriers who deliver that newspaper—as independent contractors (Complaint ¶ 18). Plaintiffs claim they really have always been employees (Complaint ¶ 15). As such, they seek the following relief relevant to this motion.

First, they claim that Defendant has violated various Labor Code provisions, entitling them to punitive damages (Complaint, Prayer for Relief ¶ 11).

Second, they seek to recover civil penalties under Sections 201 (Complaint ¶ 65), 202 (Complaint ¶ 65), 221 (Complaint ¶ 51), 223 (Complaint ¶ 51), 226.7 (Complaint ¶ 34), 1174 (Complaint ¶ 60), 1194 (Complaint ¶ 30), 1197.1 (Complaint ¶ 30) and 2802 (Complaint ¶ 48), all of which create penalties traditionally recoverable only by the California Labor Commissioner. But Plaintiffs seek these penalties without alleging exhaustion of administrative remedies as required by California's Private Attorney General Act of 2004 ("PAGA").

Third, they seek to collect penalties under Sections 203 (Complaint ¶ 65), 226 (Complaint ¶ 57), 1174.5 (Complaint ¶ 60), 1197.1 (Complaint ¶ 30), which do provide a private right of action, but only for limitations periods of one year (for claims under Sections 226, 1174.5 and 1197.1) or three years (for claims under Section 203), not for the four-year class period claimed by Plaintiffs.

Fourth, they seek Section 226.7 payments for missed meal and rest breaks (Complaint ¶ 34), while failing to say which class members (if any) have been unlawfully denied such breaks.

Finally, Plaintiffs seek reimbursement for routine employee expenses (e.g., automobile expenses) under Section 2802 (Complaint ¶ 42), in the absence of any statutory entitlement to such reimbursement.

LEGAL ARGUMENT

I. THE PUNITIVE DAMAGES PRAYER SHOULD BE STRICKEN.

A. Claims Arising From Contract Do Not Support Punitives.

Plaintiffs seek punitive damages as to "All Causes of Action" (Complaint, Prayer for Relief ¶ 11). That prayer must be stricken because punitive damages may not be awarded for claims that "arise from contract."² Punitive damages are not available absent an independent tort.³ "In the absence of an independent tort, punitive damages may not be awarded for breach of ² Cal. Civ. Code § 3294(a) ("In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract...the plaintiff...may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant.") (emphasis added); Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd., 7 Cal. 4th 503, 516 (1994).

³ Cates Constr., Inc. v. Talbot Partners, 21 Cal. 4th 28, 61 (1999) (citing Applied Equip. Corp., 7 Cal. 4th at 516).

1 contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was willful, fraudulent or 2 malicious."⁴

3 The alleged violations of wage and hour provisions of the California Labor Code all arise
4 from contract. As the California Supreme Court has recognized, actions for recovery of unpaid
5 wages arise from contract: "[A] worker's action against an employer for unpaid statutorily
6 required wages sounds in contract."⁵ In Bell v. Farmers Ins. Exchange,⁶ the Court of Appeal 7 confirmed that the "contractual duties of the employer implicitly include performance of 8 mandatory statutory duties, such as the payment of overtime wages."

9 The claims we face here all allege Labor Code violations. As such, they arise from 10 contract, precluding any recovery for punitive damages. The prayer for punitive damages
11 (Complaint, Prayer for Relief ¶ 11) is therefore improper and must be stricken.

12 B. The Labor Code Provides Exclusive Remedies.

13 The prayer for punitive damages is barred for the independent reason that the Labor
14 Code's statutory scheme provides comprehensive remedies. As the California Supreme Court 15 has recognized, "where a new right is provided by statute, the party aggrieved by its violation is 16 confined to the statutory remedy if one is provided."⁷ If a plaintiff pursues a statutory claim that 17 provides penalties for violations, then punitive damages may not be sought.⁸ Unless the statutory 18 scheme allows otherwise, courts presume that punitive damages are not allowed.⁹

20 ⁴ See id.; see also Myers Bldg. Indus., Ltd. v. Interface Tech., Inc., 13 Cal. App. 4th 949, 960
21 (1993) (even where "a separate tort action is alleged," punitives are improper "if there is 'but one 22 verdict based upon a contract'").

23 ⁵ Aubry v. Tri-City Hosp. Dist., 2 Cal. 4th 962, 969 n.5 (1992).

24 ⁶ 135 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1146-47 (2006).

25 ⁷ Stevenson v. Superior Court, 16 Cal. 4th 880, 900 (1997).

26 ⁸ Cf. Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc., 219 Cal. App.3d 811, 826-27 (1990) ("when a 27 new right, not existing at common law, is created by statute and a statutory remedy for the 28 infringement thereof is provided, such remedy is exclusive of all others unless the statutory remedy is inadequate").

⁹ See De Anza Santa Cruz Mobile Estates Homeowners Ass'n v. De Anza Santa Cruz Mobile Estates, 94 Cal. App. 4th 890, 912 (2001) ("plaintiff cannot recover both punitive damages and statutory penalties, as this would constitute a prohibited double penalty for the same act").

1 Federal district courts applying California law recognize that punitive damages are not
 2 available for Labor Code violations. In Czechowski v. Tandy,¹⁰ the plaintiffs, claiming violations
 3 of Sections 227.3 as well as Section 203 penalties, also sought punitive damages.¹¹ The United 4 States District Court for the Northern District of California held that punitive damages were not
 5 recoverable for Labor Code violations.¹²

6 Plaintiffs' claim under sections 227.3 and 203 of the Labor Code will not support a 7 punitive damages award; section 203 provides for the award of statutory penalties when 8 an employer "willfully fails to pay" wages due upon termination. The Legislature's 9 provision of such statutory penalties precludes an award of punitive damages.
 10 Czechowski held that claims under the Unfair Competition Law ("UCL"), codified in Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq., would not justify punitive damages either.¹³

11 The Northern District in *In re Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. Wage and Hour Litigation*¹⁴
 12 followed Czechowski to hold that punitive damages are not available under the wage and hour
 13 provisions of Sections 201-203, 227.3, 500, 510, 1194, or 226, and struck a claim for punitive 14 damages on that basis. Also following Czechowski, the United States District Court for the 15 Central District of California held in *Green v. Party City Corp.*¹⁵ that punitive damages are not 16 available in Section 1194 actions for unpaid overtime wages.

17 Plaintiffs seek punitive damages on the basis of various alleged Labor Code violations,
 18 and not on the basis of any tort for which punitive damages would otherwise be available.
 19 Accordingly, the prayer for punitive damages is improper and must be stricken.

1 C. The Ninth Cause of Action for Unfair Business Practices
 2 Cannot Support An Award of Punitive Damages.

3 The only claim that is not purely a Labor Code claim is the Ninth Cause of Action for 4 unfair business practices in violation of the UCL. And a UCL claim cannot justify punitive
 5 damages, for “it is settled law that punitive damages are not available under section 17200.”¹⁶

6 Because Plaintiffs may not recover punitive damages for any claim, the prayer for 7 punitive damages is improper and must be stricken.

8 II. PENALTY CLAIMS UNDER SECTIONS 201, 202, 221, 223, 226.3, 9 1174, 1194, 1197.1, AND 2802 MUST BE STRICKEN AS THERE IS 10 NO PRIVATE RIGHT TO RECOVER PENALTIES.

11 A. Only the Labor Commissioner can recover civil penalties,
 12 absent an expressly authorized private action.

13 Several claims allege entitlement to penalties of $100, $200, or $250 per employee per 14 pay period.¹⁷ While the California Labor Commissioner can recover such penalties,¹⁸ private 15 litigants (other than those suing under Sections 203 or 226)¹⁹ can collect civil penalties only 16 under the PAGA, which is codified in Labor Code § 2699 et seq.²⁰

17 B. Plaintiffs have not brought PAGA claims.

18 Plaintiffs have not cited PAGA and have not alleged that they have exhausted their 19 PAGA-required administrative remedies by filing with the Labor and Workforce Development
 20 Agency (“LWDA”).²¹ Accordingly, each penalty claim contained within paragraphs 30, 34, 48, 21 51, 60, and 65 of the complaint must be stricken.

8 Plaintiffs claim penalties for alleged violations of Section 226 (Sixth Cause of Action—
 9 Failure to Provide Itemized Wage Statements), 1174 (Seventh Cause of Action—Failure to Keep 10 Accurate Payroll Records), and 1197.1 (First Cause of Action—Failure to Pay Wages). Because 11 the relevant limitations period for each such penalty claim is one year,²² those claims are time-12 barred as to any Plaintiff whose contract with Defendant ended before April 18, 2007, and as to any conduct preceding that date.

13 B. A three-year statute governs the Section 203 claim.

14 Plaintiffs claim Section 203 waiting-time penalties (Eighth Cause of Action—Waiting 15 Time Penalties). Because this claim has a three-year statute of limitations,²³ it is time-barred as 16 to any Plaintiff whose contract with Defendant ended before April 18, 2005.

17 Section 203 penalties cannot be recovered for the four-year limitations period generally

1 remedy,²⁵ and the penal nature of Section 203 payments precludes their characterization as 2 restitution.²⁶ Restitution applies only to a vested property right.²⁷

3 Plaintiffs might suppose that Section 203 penalties resemble vested property because they 4 arise immediately upon the failure to pay termination wages. But that theory is flawed, because 5 a Section 203 penalty is available only if the failure to pay wages was “willful.” The requirement
 6 of a willfulness finding makes any Section 203 entitlement contingent, not vested. Willfulness is 7 obviously at issue here as the parties dispute whether Plaintiffs are employees and thus whether 8 Section 203 applies at all. Section 203 penalties therefore are not a vested property right subject
 9 to restitutionary recovery.²⁸

10 IV. CLASS ALLEGATIONS SHOULD BE STRICKEN AS TO OVERTIME, 11 MEAL, AND REST CLAIMS.

12 Plaintiffs proposed a class of everyone who has been “employed” by Defendant “in the 13 State of California as newspaper carriers or delivery personnel for the North County Times 14 newspaper during the Class Period who were subject to the ‘Delivery Agent Agreement’ (or 15 similar document), which categorized them as independent contractors and not employees.”
 16 Complaint at 6:12-16.

17 This proposed class definition is legally defective for three independent reasons as to the 18 claims for unpaid overtime (Complaint ¶ 29), denied meal breaks (Complaint ¶ 32), and denied 19 rest breaks (Complaint ¶ 36).

20 (A) The proposed class is unascertainable as to these particular claims.

 wages from suit for penalty stemming from failure to pay wages).

(B) These claims fail to meet Rule 8(a)(2) pleading requirements by failing to allege sufficient facts to raise a right to relief beyond mere speculation.

(C) Plaintiffs fail to allege any facts to show that the proposed class members have common claims with respect to meal and rest periods.

A. The proposed class is unascertainable.

While Plaintiffs would represent “all ... newspaper carriers or delivery personnel for the North County Times,” they do not allege that each carrier provided delivery services (1) for seven consecutive days (a predicate for any seventh-day overtime claim),²⁹ (2) in excess of five hours a day (a predicate for any meal-break claim),³⁰ or (3) in excess of three and one-half hours a day (a predicate for any rest-break claim).³¹ As such, the proposed class is overbroad.

Class certification should be denied when the proposed class definition is overbroad and where, as here, the plaintiffs offer no means by which to distinguish those class members who have claims from those who do not.³² Ascertainability is best achieved by defining the class with objective characteristics and common transactional facts.³³

Here, Plaintiffs identify a class of carriers who have delivered the North County Times, but fail to identify any objective characteristics and common transactional facts to allow the Court to ascertain which purported class members have overtime and meal and rest claims. The deficient proposed class definition would require individualized determinations as to which carriers belong in the class and which do not. As such, the proposed class definition fails and should be stricken as to these claims.

1 B. Plaintiffs fail to allege facts to show who, if anyone, suffered
 2 any injury with respect to overtime or meal and rest breaks.

3 These claims flunk pleading requirements by failing to allege facts to support the claim
 4 that class members suffered injury. Indeed, Plaintiffs fatally fail to allege a single fact to show
 5 that they themselves suffered any injury with respect to overtime or meal and rest breaks.

6 Rule 8(a)(2) requires “a short and plain statement of claim showing that the pleader is 7 entitled to relief.” (Emphasis added.) In Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly,³⁴ the Supreme Court
 8 clarified this obligation: the plaintiff must allege sufficient facts to raise a right to relief above 9 the speculative level; it is not enough to merely create a suspicion of a legally cognizable right of 10 action.³⁵ Twombly requires allegation of “enough facts” to “nudge[] [the] claim[s] across the line
 11 from conceivable to probable.”³⁶

12 The Second Circuit applied Twombly to dismiss a civil rights “policy and practice” claim
 13 arising out of an alleged illegal detainment.³⁷ Stressing that Twombly applies beyond its antitrust
 14 context, the court held that Twombly’s “plausibility standard” obliges a plaintiff to “amplify a 15 claim with some factual allegations in those contexts where such amplification is needed to 16 render the claim plausible.”³⁸ The Second Circuit then applied Twombly to determine whether 17 the civil rights plaintiff had adequately stated a claim.³⁹ Twombly’s plausibility standard thus 18 applies where, as here, a plaintiff vaguely alleges a “pattern or practice.” To make a claim 19 plausible, plaintiffs must specify supporting facts.

20 In a class claim, “the complaint should indicate who [the class-members] are and allege 21 facts that would entitle them to relief.”⁴⁰ Without factual allegations that establish their own

 (applying Twombly to dismiss FLSA collective action where plaintiff’s failure to generally name

injuries and those of the putative class, there is no basis to believe Plaintiffs' class allegations are "plausible on their face."⁴¹

Under Rule 8(a), as illuminated by Twombly, Plaintiffs must plead facts to support their claim that class members were entitled to overtime and meal and rest breaks. Here, Plaintiffs do nothing more than plead legal conclusions that broadly recite the elements of overtime and meal and rest claims. Plaintiffs fail to offer any facts whatsoever to make their theories "plausible." They even fail to allege facts to support that any named Plaintiff was denied overtime or meal and rest breaks contrary to law. Moreover, they fail to allege what Defendant did to deny the putative class members any legally required meal or rest break. Their superficial effort runs afoul of Rule 8(a).

C. Plaintiffs fail to allege facts showing class members have common overtime, meal, and rest claims.

Plaintiffs also fail to allege any facts to show that putative class members share common claims with respect to meal and rest breaks. There is no specific allegation that all or even most carriers work a seventh consecutive workday (a prerequisite to overtime), work more than five hours a day (a prerequisite to meal-break entitlement), or work more than three and one-half hours a day (a prerequisite to rest-break entitlement). This failure to specify facts to show liability requires dismissal of or striking the related class claims.

V. THE EXPENSE-REIMBURSEMENT CLAIM FAILS TO STATE A CLAIM FOR WHICH RELIEF CAN BE GRANTED.

Plaintiffs allege that Defendant has unlawfully failed to reimburse them for automobile expenses incurred during their alleged employment as newspaper carriers (Complaint ¶ 42). In paragraph 40, Plaintiffs cite Section 2802(a): "An employer shall indemnify his or her employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by the employee in direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties, or of his or her obedience to the directions similarly situated employees left no "factual basis from which the Court can determine whether similarly situated plaintiffs do exist").

⁴¹ Twombly, 127 S. Ct. at 1970-71.

1 of the employer, even though unlawful, unless the employee, at the time of obeying the 2 directions, believed them to be unlawful.” (Relevant language emphasized.)

3 While some courts have uncritically assumed that this provision applies to reimbursement
4 of routine employee expenses such as mileage expenses, an objective analysis of the law reveals 5 that an employer has no duty (other than possibly contractually) to reimburse for such expenses.

6 The Section 2802 duty to “indemnify” relates to an employee’s loss caused by the acts of 7 third parties (including such things as (1) a lawsuit against the employee for conduct within the 8 scope of the employee’s employment and (2) other losses caused by third parties). The Industrial 9 Welfare Commission (“IWC”)—the administrative agency charged with rulemaking under 10 Section 2802 (and thus whose construction is entitled to deference)—does not construe Section 11 2802 to provide broad rights for reimbursement of any routine work-related expense incurred by 12 an employee. Similarly, cases addressing car expenses properly do so as a matter of agreement 13 between the parties, not a statutory right.

14 Further, the limited right to reimbursement established by the IWC’s Wage Orders
15 applies only to uniforms, tools, and equipment, not to automobiles.

16 In short, the expense-reimbursement claim feeds on assumption, not law. Although 17 employers customarily reimburse routine employee expenses, they do so to meet market 18 demands, not statutory demands.

19 Any construction of Section 2802 to cover routine employee expenses contradicts the 20 IWC’s interpretation of the law, decades of case law, and the meaning of the word “indemnify.”

21 A. Plaintiffs’ interpretation conflicts with that of the IWC.

22 The Wage Orders, promulgated by the IWC under its statutory mandate to monitor the 23 “hours and conditions of labor and employment in the various occupations, trades, and industries 24 in which employees are employed in this state,”⁴² provide a limited right to reimbursement for 25 uniforms, tools, and equipment. Expressly exempted from the tool-and-equipment requirement
26

27 ⁴² Lab. Code § 1173.

1 are employees who earn more than twice the minimum wage.⁴³ The IWC's exemption as to 2 these highly compensated employees cannot be reconciled with Plaintiff's broad interpretation of 3 Section 2802, and reveals that the IWC does not interpret Section 2802 to provide for a broad 4 right of reimbursement.

5 1. The IWC permits employers to require employees to 6 provide tools and equipment without reimbursement.

7 Section 9(B) of IWC Order No. 4-2001, for example, provides: "When tools or 8 equipment are required by the employer or are necessary to the performance of a job, such tools
 9 and equipment shall be provided and maintained by the employer, except that an employee 10 whose wages are at least two (2) times the minimum wage provided herein may be required to 11 provide and maintain hand tools and equipment customarily required by the trade or craft."

12 If the Plaintiff were interpreting Section 2802 correctly, then the IWC orders would be 13 ultra vires. There is no principled distinction between (1) an employer who requires employees 14 to provide and maintain tools and equipment, and (2) an employer who requires employees to 15 provide and maintain an automobile. Put another way, there would be no warrant for the IWC to 16 create a limited reimbursement right for hand tools and equipment—which permits employers to 17 require certain employees to maintain tools and equipment at their own expense—if there were 18 already a generally applicable reimbursement right under Section 2802. The IWC's Wage 19 Orders thus contradict Plaintiffs' notion that Section 2802 requires an employer to provide and 20 maintain (i.e., by means of expense reimbursement) automobiles to employees who use 21 automobiles on the job.

22 Thus, if Plaintiffs' view of Section 2802 were correct, the IWC would lack authority to 23 permit employers to impose on more highly compensated employees the obligation to provide 24 and maintain their own tools and equipment. If the understanding of Section 2802 that is 25 ⁴³ Wage Order § 9(B) ("When tools or equipment are required by the employer or are necessary 26 to the performance of the job, such tools and equipment shall be provided and maintained by the 27 employer, except that an employee whose wages are at least two (2) times the minimum wage 28 provided herein may be required to provide and maintain hand tools and equipment customarily required by the trade or craft.")

1 inherent to the IWC rule on tools and equipment is correct, then the Plaintiffs' expansive view of 2 Section 2802 necessarily must be wrong.

3 2. The IWC interpretation of Section 2802 deserves
4 deference.

5 The IWC has statutory authority to promulgate wage orders to set the "hours . . . in the 6 various occupations, trades, and industries in which employees are employed in this state" and to 7 set their "conditions of labor and employment."⁴⁴ Courts "accord[] great weight and respect" to 8 a valid administrative construction of a controlling statute or regulation," including the IWC's
9 construction on the scope of statutes imposing "conditions of labor and employment."⁴⁵ An 10 obvious corollary of that deference is that courts must avoid constructions of statutory provisions 11 that would render duly promulgated administrative regulations ultra vires, unless such 12 constructions are mandated by considerations that overcome the "great weight and respect" duly 13 accorded to the construction implicit in the regulations.

14 As set forth below, the IWC's interpretation of the limited scope of Section 2802 is not 15 overcome by such considerations. Its interpretation comports with decades of case law 16 interpreting Section 2802 and its predecessor codification (former Civil Code Section 1969), and 17 with the very meaning of the word "indemnify."

18 3. Cases construing Section 2802 or its predecessor do not 19 require reimbursement for routine employee expenses.

20 No California appellate court has expressly held that Section 2802 requires employers to 21 indemnify employees for incidental expenses such as mileage. In fact, the few cases interpreting 22 the indemnification required by Section 2802 have arisen from situations in which a third party
23 to the employment relationship caused the losses to the plaintiff.

26 ⁴⁴ Lab. Code § 1173.

27 ⁴⁵ Tidewater Marine Western, Inc. v. Bradshaw, 14 Cal. 4th 557, 568-70 (1996) (quoting 28 International Business Machines v. State Bd. of Equalization, 26 Cal. 3d 923, 931 n.7 (1980)).

a. Section 2802 cases have concerned losses caused by third parties.

Cases interpreting Section 2802 have dealt with two major issues: (1) whether employers must indemnify employees for attorney fees the employee has incurred in defending a third party's suit arising out of the employee's performance of job duties and (2) whether employers must indemnify employees for the loss of the employee's tools that were stolen from the employer's premises. Consistent with the very meaning of "indemnify," these cases address liabilities to, and losses caused by, third parties to the employment relationship. Expenses of defending liability claims by third parties are, of course, part of the very liability itself, for purposes of indemnity.

No California state appellate court has extended the reach of Section 2802 beyond the above cases to require employers to reimburse employees for routine business expenses. Rather, those expenses typically have been a matter of contract between the parties to an employment relationship.

b. Cases concerning automobile expenses treat them as matter of contract, not indemnity.

Cases specifically addressing automobile-related expenses have analyzed any requirement to reimburse for mileage as a matter of contract. In O'Brien v. L.E. White Lumber Co.,⁴⁶ O'Brien and his employer agreed to reduce his salary to reflect a downturn in business. Two years later, when the employer sold the business, O'Brien sought reimbursement for automobile expenses incurred in his employment. The court held that he was not entitled to that reimbursement, because his agreement with his employer did not call for that reimbursement.⁴⁷ Conspicuously absent from the court's analysis was any suggestion that Civil Code Section 1969, the predecessor codification to Section 2802,⁴⁸ might provide for such reimbursement.

⁴⁶ 43 Cal. App. 703 (1919).

⁴⁷ Id. at 706-707.

⁴⁸ Section 2802 was enacted in 1937 based upon former Civil Code section 1969, "without substantial change." Chapter 90 of the statutes of 1937. See Douglas v. Los Angeles Herald Examiner, 50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 457 (1975) (noting no substantial change).

1 Similarly, *Automobile, Truck, Tractor & Implement Co. v. Salladay*⁴⁹ looked to the 2 parties' agreement, rather than statute, to find a right to reimbursement. Salladay was hired as a 3 commissioned salesman but the terms of his employment contained no indication that he "was to 4 discharge his duties at any place other than the one indicated in the caption of the letter."⁵⁰ Just 5 like Plaintiffs here, Salladay sought reimbursement for certain expenses "incidental" to the 6 services rendered to his employer, including automobile-related expenses. Salladay concluded
 7 that the employer had to reimburse Salladay's automobile-related expenses, but not because 8 Civil Code Section 1969 required any such reimbursement. Rather, Salladay focused on whether 9 the parties' agreement required that reimbursement.⁵¹

10 No California state court that addressed whether an employer must reimburse
 11 automobile-related expenses has expressly held that reimbursement is required by Section 2802
 12 or its predecessor codification.⁵² The case law certainly does not contradict the IWC's 13 interpretation of Section 2802, much less provide any counterweight to the "great weight and 14 respect" that the IWC's interpretation deserves.

15 4. "Indemnity" simply entails reimbursement for losses
 16 caused by third parties or liabilities to third parties

17 The understanding of the IWC, and the limited application of Section 2802 in the case 18 law, comports with Section 2802's language. Section 2802 does not require employers to 19 "reimburse" employees; it requires employers to "indemnify" employees. The distinction is 20 crucial. As noted above, the black-letter meaning of "indemnify" involves holding someone 21 harmless from liabilities incurred to, or caused by, third parties. Civil Code Section 2772 defines 22 "indemnity" as "a contract by which one engages to save another from a legal consequence of one of the parties, or of some other person,” and the California Supreme Court has construed Section 2772 consistently with the black-letter meaning. In Somers v. U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co.,⁵³ the court stated: “in indemnity contracts the engagement is to make good and save another from loss upon some obligation which he has incurred or is about to incur to a third person.”⁵⁴

B. Plaintiffs cannot rely on Wage Orders to supply a right to reimbursement.

Just as Plaintiffs cannot rely upon Section 2802 to supply the alleged broad right to reimbursement for routine expenses, they likewise cannot rely on the Wage Orders, which create only a limited right to reimbursement for a limited variety of expenses.

1. Wage Orders require reimbursement only for uniforms and tools and equipment in certain circumstances.

In exercising its rule-making authority, the IWC requires employers to provide tools and equipment necessary to the performance of the job, with the exception that more highly compensated employees (those earning double the minimum wage) can be required to provide and maintain their own set of hand tools and equipment customarily required by their trade or craft. In addition, the IWC also has required employers to provide and maintain uniforms, when the uniforms are required as a condition of employment.

Although the IWC could regulate employment terms and conditions relating to the use of personal vehicles by employees, the IWC has never promulgated any such rule. Indeed, it is well understood that the use of personal automobiles is an area that the IWC has not sought to regulate. The California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement has responded to an inquiry whether an automobile used in the course of employment was a “tool” within the meaning of Section 9(B) of IWC Order No. 4-80: “The Labor Commissioner has determined that neither an automobile nor a truck is considered a tool within the meaning of the section, and an applicant for employment may be required, as a condition of employment, to furnish his/her own

1 automobile or truck to be used in the course of employment, regardless of the amount of wages
2 paid.”⁵⁵

3 The IWC has never brought the use of personal automobiles within the scope of its rule
4 on tools and equipment, nor has the IWC ever promulgated a separate rule on reimbursement for 5 the use of automobiles in employment. Simply stated, in the eyes of the IWC, reimbursement of 6 employees for their use of personal automobiles remains a term of employment for negotiation
7 by the parties.

8 2. The DLSE’s views are not entitled to any deference.

9 Notwithstanding its recognition that “an applicant for employment may be required, as a 10 condition of employment, to furnish his/her own automobile or truck to be used in the course of 11 employment,” the DLSE has opined (without reasoned analysis) that an employer must 12 reimburse for automobile-related expenses.⁵⁶ “Under Labor Code Section 2802, an employer 13 who requires an employee to furnish his/her own car or truck to be used in the course of 14 employment would be obligated to reimburse the employee for the costs necessarily incurred by 15 the employee in using the car or truck in the course of employment. The rate of reimbursement 16 can be that agreed to by the employer and employee, or, if there is no such agreement, any 17 reasonable amount.”

18 But unlike the IWC (whose regulations the DLSE’s “interpretation” contradicts), the 19 DLSE’s views deserve zero judicial weight. In Tidewater Marine Western v. Bradshaw,⁵⁷ the 20 California Supreme Court reaffirmed the deference owed to an administrative agency that acts in 21 conformity with the Administrative Procedures Act (APA).⁵⁸ The IWC, the court noted, is 22 exempted from APA compliance because the Labor Code imposes specific “detailed 23 comprehensive procedural protections applicable to IWC rulemaking,” which are “analogous to 24

25 ⁵⁵ DLSE Manual §§ 29.2.3.2 and 29.2.3.3.

26 ⁵⁶ See Gattuso, 42 Cal. 4th at 563-64.

28 ⁵⁸ Id. at 568-69. The APA is codified at Gov’t Code § 11346 et seq.

1 those in the APA.”⁵⁹ Thus, the IWC is subject to a statutory exception to the APA, and the
 2 IWC’s constructions deserve deference without specific APA compliance.⁶⁰

3 But the court rejected the same conclusion with regard to the DLSE’s interpretive efforts:
 4 “[t]he DLSE’s primary function is enforcement, not rulemaking.”⁶¹ The court thus held that the 5 DLSE must comply with the APA before pronouncing that “rule[s] of general application to 6 guide deputy labor commissioners on the applicability of IWC wage orders” are entitled to 7 deference.⁶² Because the DLSE’s interpretive manuals did not comply with the APA, the court
 8 held: “the DLSE’s interpretation of the IWC wage orders is void and not entitled to any 9 deference.”⁶³

10 The DLSE somehow concludes that although automobiles are not “tools” within the 11 meaning of the Wage Orders, employers must reimburse employees for automobile expenses.
 12 This unfounded, illogical conclusion deserves no “weight and respect.” And recently the 13 California Supreme Court in Gattuso has confirmed this very point: “Here, as the parties agree, 14 the DLSE’s interpretation of section 2802, as applied to automobile expenses, was incorporated
 15 into a void regulation. Accordingly, we review the relevant DLSE policy statements and DLSE
 16 advice and opinion letters as evidence of the DLSE’s interpretation of sections 2802 and 2804, 17 recognizing that its interpretation is entitled to no deference but also that this court may adopt the 18 DLSE’s interpretation if we independently determine that it is correct.”⁶⁴

Defendant respectfully requests that the Court grant its motion to dismiss or strike and rule that Plaintiffs

- cannot recover punitive damages on their claims,
- cannot collect civil penalties for which there exists no direct private right of action,
- cannot collect penalties for which there is a private right of action for any period greater than the one-year or three-year statute of limitations that applies to each such private right of action for penalties,
- cannot maintain class allegations for overtime, meal, and rest claims because they fail to identify an ascertainable class, and
- cannot maintain their Section 2802 claim for unreimbursed routine employee expenses.

6 I am a resident of the State of California, over the age of eighteen years, and not a party
 7 to the within action. My business address is Seyfarth Shaw LLP, 2029 Century Park East, Suite
 8 3300, Los Angeles, California 90067-3063. On the date stated below, I served the within 9 documents:

10 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
 11 IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS OR STRIKE

- 12 ☒ by placing the document(s) listed above in a sealed envelope with postage thereon
 13 fully prepaid, in the United States mail at Los Angeles, California addressed as set 14 forth below.
- 15 ☐ by placing the document(s) listed above, together with an unsigned copy of this 16 declaration, in a sealed Federal Express envelope with postage paid on account and 17 deposited with Federal Express at Los Angeles, California, addressed as set forth 18 below.
- 19 ☐ by transmitting the document(s) listed above, electronically, via the e-mail addresses 20 set forth below.

29 I am readily familiar with the firm's practice of collection and processing correspondence
 30 for mailing. Under that practice it would be deposited with the U.S. Postal Service on that same 31 day with postage thereon fully prepaid in the ordinary course of business. I am aware that on 32 motion of the party served, service is presumed invalid if postal cancellation date or postage
 33 meter date is more than on day after the date of deposit for mailing in affidavit.

34 I declare that I am employed in the office of a member of the bar of this court whose 35 direction the service was made.

36 Executed on June 24, 2008, at Los Angeles, California.
